THE ADMIRAL

Favorite food:

A "galleon" of rocky road ice cream

Favorite basketball player:

David "the Admiral" Robinson

Favorite football team:

The Buccaneers

Favorite song:

Row, Row, Row Your Boat

The admiral of the Imperial Armada is one of the toughest sea dogs to sail the seven seas. Everyone calls him "the Admiral" because no one knows what his name is. He was marooned on a desert island when he was a baby and found by some Islanders. Ever since then, he's been a sailor.

The Admiral wears his super shiny armor everywhere, even in the tub. It just takes him awhile to scrub the rust stains off his neck.

His favorite tub toy is

#6289 Red Beard's Runner. "I like to practice sinking his ship," says the Admiral.

The Admiral is a real sports fan. He especially likes to hang out with his friends the Islanders and play soccer. In the islands, they use coconuts for balls and palm trees for goals. "My scores aren't too good, but we sure eat well after the game," he says.

Hey, kids. Help give my friend, the Admiral a name. See the contest on the back page to place your vote.

A working compass helps point you in the right direction!

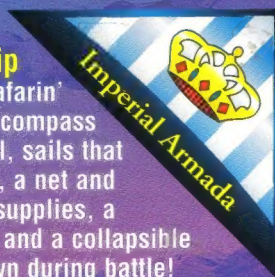

HOIST YER SAILS

Join the action as the Imperial Armada joins forces with the Islanders against the plundering Pirates.

#6280

Armada Flagship

Look at all this seafarin' stuff — a working compass and steering wheel, sails that hoist up and down, a net and crane to crank up supplies, a swiveling cannon, and a collapsible mast that falls down during battle!

Pull the pin and drop the mast! After battle, snap the mast back into place.

Hoist sails up and down!

The Admiral's crew voted him best dressed in a shiny chrome vest.

Hand over the Islander gold, Red Beard, or walk the plank!

FOR SOME SEAFARIN' FUN!

#6289 Red Beard Runner

Hoist the sails! This mighty pirate ship is loaded and ready for the toughest sea battles. When the mast collapses on to the deck, just pop it back up and you won't be shipwrecked. If the skull hull gets rammed and starts to break away, the crew can snap it back and save the day. Beware of the secret winch and net — Red Beard uses them to load all the treasure (and prisoners) he can get.

Keep Skull Cave a secret — push the tooth to make skull face swivel — look what's inside!

Push the catapult and watch Skully do the "Volcano Vault!"

Pull the pin to drop the mast!

A working compass on board!

#6248 Volcano Island

Although Volcano diving may not be an official Olympic sport, it's pretty popular on Volcano Island. Skully's hidden the treasure so well that he can spend his days diving instead of guarding the treasure. Check out his latest dive, "Volcano Vault!"

Skull hull breaks away and then you can save the ship by snapping it back into place!

Hoist sails up and down!

Hoist treasure with crane to keep it safe!

Secret Jail

Hidden catapult sends treasure stealers sailing!

George, is that you?

You don't scare me, ah...what is your name anyway?

#6232 Skeleton Crew

#6296 Shipwreck Island

This treasure island is so much fun, that all the pirates just flip over it. One wrong step could send you sailing through the air, hoisted in a net, or a crocodile's lunch.

Feature Story

EXPLORER FRANCIS DRAKE —AROUND THE WORLD IN 1095 DAYS?

It's a good thing Francis Drake became a sailor. He didn't live on land very much. He was born around 1540, and when he was eight, his father moved the family onto an abandoned boat. By the time he was 17, Francis was captain of his own ship. He probably didn't mind getting away from home — he had 11 brothers!

In his lifetime, Drake was a hero and a pirate, depending on which country you ask. In 1580, he became the second explorer to sail around the world. And in 1588, he helped the English navy defeat the Spanish Armada. Join Drake in his adventures around the world. Just follow his stops on the map.

Stock Montage © 1995

4 1579: Drake stopped near California to repair the ship. He stayed a month visiting with the local Indians.

Sailing with the Armada

Pretend you're Francis Drake living in England about 400 years ago. Coming toward you is a fleet of 130 sailing ships...the Spanish Armada!

The Armada made an awesome sight as it sailed toward England in 1588. At that time England and Spain were fighting each other. An Armada warship, or galleon, looked a lot like the #6280 Imperial Armada Flagship. The galleons' hulls were painted in bright colors, there were carved decorations on the ships, and big red crosses filled the sails.

The ships carried spare masts and sails because these were the parts of ships that were damaged the most. The masts were made from big trees and couldn't just be snapped back in place like those on the #6280 Imperial Armada Flagship. During a battle, men rushed to repair damage to the ship's hull. They used canvas and tar to patch holes. Repairing a #6289 Red Beard Runner is much easier — you just pop the hull back in place.

A Spanish Armada galleon could fire 50-pound cannonballs as far as five football fields (500 yards). The Spanish fired over 123,000 cannonballs at the English galleons without seriously damaging one ship! Their cannonballs were defective.

Because Drake was such a successful pirate against their ships, the Spanish called him The Dragon. They even believed that he had a magic mirror on his ship that showed him where their treasure was hidden!

Because the English ships could shoot cannonballs 700 yards, the English tried to sink the Spanish galleons from far away. But from that distance, their lightweight cannonballs just bounced off the Spanish ships. Of the 130 ships in the Armada, about half returned to Spain. But only one ship was sunk by English cannons. The rest were abandoned, wrecked by storms, or damaged from crashing into other ships.

What was it like aboard the Armada during the long voyage from Spain to England?

Stinky. To save water the crew didn't wash themselves or their clothes for two months!

Just Crank It!

Protective Roll Bar!

Turn the knob on top to steer your Buggy over tough terrain!

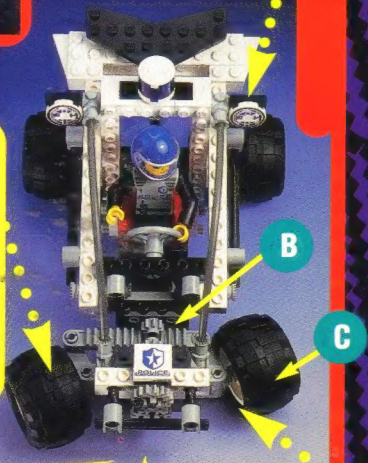

The new #8230 Police Buggy chases crooks, over any terrain. And thanks to its rack and pinion steering, turns will be super smooth and in control.

What's rack and pinion steering, you say? Here's the real deal. See that knob on top of the Buggy. That steers the front wheels. But not right away. A First it cranks the axle connected to the wheels. B The axle cranks a gear connected to that bar with the teeth on it. C The bar then turns the wheels. Actually, it's a lot easier to do than to explain, so just crank it and cruise!

And here's a building tip from our Master Builder, Allen about using rack and pinion steering with your other LEGO sets. "It's great for making things turn," Allen says. "If you want to turn a radar dish on a police station or rotate a satellite dish on a house, you can do it with rack and pinion steering pieces."
